Pool closes Aug. 12 for final upgrade

BY FRANK DABBS
 MVP Staff

The Didsbury Aquatic Centre will close Aug. 12 for three months to allow for the third and final phase of upgrades, manager of community services Nicole Aasen said July 22.

Council has awarded Aztec Renovations and Refit of Calgary a $488,250 contract to sandblast, repair and repaint the steel beams of the centre, Aasen said.

"The Didsbury Aquatic Centre will close its doors at 5 p.m. on August 12 and hopes to reopen no later than November 1," she said.

In anticipation of the closure, pool management is contacting other aquatic facilities in municipalities throughout Mountain View County to make them aware of the closure and that they may see increased attendance, Aasen said.

When the pool reopens, passes will be extended for the same amount of time as the closure so that pool patrons do not suffer financially. School swimming programs, aquatic fitness programs and lap and public swim times will resume after the pool reopens, she pointed out.

The pool will be drained and the mechanical equipment protected before the sandblasting begins.

The aquatic centre has operated for 24 years and there has been significant rusting of the steel beam structure due to the humidity generated by the pool, the hot tub and the steam room.

This is the third phase of the upgrade. The first, in 2014, saw the exterior roof replaced and the exterior of the water slide tower repaired at a total cost of $297,272.60.

In 2015, the main pool boiler was replaced and there were upgrades to the electrical system, the countertops in the change room were replaced and a number of smaller repairs and replacements took place at a cost of $138,784.32.

Even if a 15 per cent contingency of $66,750 is needed this year, the three-year project will cost $870,807.12 - $329,192.88 under the anticipated cost of $1.3 million, Aasen said.

Volunteers bring pop up park to life for holiday weekend

A work park of volunteers installed murals and signage July 21 and more work on murals, outdoor games, benches and flower gardens is scheduled, pop up park organizer Kevin Bentley said. The park will be a busy place over the holiday weekend with a "paint the moose" kick off July 30 in conjunction with the downtown merchants medieval yule in July and the Days of Yore festival at Rosebud Park, Bentley said.

Town to install new Didsbury signs

It is expected that town staff will begin to install the newly-designed municipal signage shortly after council approved a priority list of locations at its July 12 meeting. The town has $80,000 in this year's operating budget for the project. Town manager of legislative and development services Chistofor Atchison said the staff are, "currently working with the signage manufacturer to place an order," He said, "we are not one hundred percent sure on which signs will be installed in this budget year. "Council's priority is certainly the main entrance on Highway 582 at the east boundary to the municipality. We also need to have signage manufactured for the new fire hall and some of our other facilities," Atchison said. Public ideas are being implemented for Memorial Complex park

Feedback from an open house for park development east of the Memorial Complex is being incorporated into the plan, said Didsbury community services manager Nicole Aasen July 21. Aasen said town staff and landscape architect consultants from ISL Engineering and Land Services are making changes based on comments submitted by local residents June 22 and 23 and online until July 8 based on two concepts for the park.

Police Briefs

Spike in American counterfeit bills

The Didsbury Chamber of Commerce is warning its merchant members of a spike in the attempted distribution of false American bills from $5 to $100.

On July 18 the chamber emailed an alert from the Didsbury RCMP detachment that Didsbury is one of several jurisdictions across Alberta that in the business week of July 18 saw a spike in incidents of the passing of counterfeit money.

Police recommend that employees become familiar with the security features embedded in American currency that can be found at <https://uscurrency.gov/>.

If people suspect that someone is using counterfeit currency or are notified by their financial institution that they have phoney bills, they are asked to contact the Didsbury RCMP detachment at 403-335-3382.

Didsbury thieves were busy July 15 and 16.

Cpl. Resus Organ at the weekly RCMP news briefing July 21 said that the occupants were away when two males entered a house on Southridge Crescent and stole stereo equipment on July 15.

And there were no witnesses and are no suspects in a break and enter on 7th Avenue when thieves made off with a chainsaw and various tools after they entered a garage via a garden shed July 16.

Prowler breaks into Home Hardware garden centre

Nothing was stolen when a prowler cut the lock on the gate and entered the Didsbury Home Hardware garden centre on 20th Street.

However, the would-be thief appears to have attempted unsuccessfully to make coffee.

The break-in was discovered July 18 and took place over the weekend.

Vandals slash tires

Mischief-makers targeted the owner of a vehicle parked on Westheights

Avenue when the vehicle tires were slashed July 18.

Again, there were no witnesses and are no suspects, Cpl. Organ said.

Rural thefts continue

Several shipping containers at Blocks Container Structures on Rge. Rd. 35 in Mountain View County were broken into on July 15. Various items, including household items, were stolen.

Also on July 15, an alert citizen interrupted the attempted theft of a truck on Rge. Rd. 15 and alerted police to the incident.

Meanwhile, a shop on a rural property on Rge. Rd. 50 was broken into on July 16.

Cpl. Organ said the door was forced open and various items were stolen, including a red 2006 Polaris Sportsman, licence plate AED41 and a firearm.

Suspicious person reported at Water Valley

A suspicious person was reported to police after ringing the doorbell at a home on Rge. Rd. 52 near Water Valley multiple times around 1 a.m. on July 17.

Police say the homeowner didn't answer the door and the person was shining a flashlight through the windows.

Cpl. Organ said the person could have been checking to see if anyone was home before breaking in. He said people should make it known they are home and if this happens they should turn the light on and call police.

"This way people know that you're home and there's somebody there, they don't know who or what, but turn the light on and immediately call the police," said Organ.

If anyone has any information regarding these incidents they are asked to call the Didsbury RCMP detachment at 403-335-3382 or call Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-TIPS (8477).

The dog days of summer

When I was a rookie in the newspaper game, this was the time of year when a hard-boiled editor two days past a shower and shave said in his whiskey rasp, "Here's a roll of quarters, go do a story about what two bits can still buy."

The roll of quarters was a roll of nickels when the editor was a junior, but the problem hadn't changed.

FRANK DABBS

Good news stories had gone on vacation with the folk who generated them – the politicians, half the detective squad and the school board.

The editors scrambled for black ink to fill the white space between the ads.

The dog days of summer had arrived.

The '60s were late landing in western Canadian newsrooms, culturally speaking. We had older reporters and editors whose career high point was working with Ernest Hemingway at the Toronto Star.

They were all single and their idea of a fine summer Saturday morning was sitting on a back stoop, smoking cigarettes and typing short stories to submit to fiction-publishing magazines in New England.

Accordingly, the burden to fill the newspaper pages during the dog days fell onto the shoulders of us young and hungry cubs.

Five decades on, the roll of quarters would now be a roll of toonies if an editor had the inclination to assign such a story.

It was the Greeks or the Romans who coined the dog days phrase. The phrase has an astrological origin. It is the season when Sirius, the Dog Star rises with the sun – from early July to mid-August.

It was a season of apprehension.

It was not thought to be a propitious time for major enterprises like going to war.

Better drink a glass of cool wine and to wait for the lemons and olives to ripen while the doves stayed out of the sun in the belfries.

The dog days metaphor has morphed to symbolize the vague listlessness that accompanies the debilitating heat of summer.

Today there is a sharp edge for us to the way the ancients understood the dangers of the dog days.

These are dog days for the British looking for the advantages of Brexit.

These are dog days for U.S. Republicans and Democrats at presidential conventions with two candidates neither the parties nor the voters are happy with.

These are dog days for American cops wondering who on the thin blue line will take the next bullet.

These are dog days for Alberta conservatives wrestling their sweaty way to the top to navigate their party through a tornado called "unite the right."

These are dog days in Didsbury for those who have lost jobs this year and are looking for new ones.

If only life were as simple as what can a quarter – or a toonie – still buy.

Voting 'out' was frustration towards parliament

Re: commentary column by Simon Ducatel, "Overzealous and unquestioning nationalism a disease of humankind," p.6, July 5 Innisfail Province

Whilst I fully agree with the underlying sentiment of the comments made (i.e., there is absolutely no place in a normal civil society for right-wing nationalists, extremists, radical hardliners, racists or bigots) I feel there should be some explanation as to why in my view a (slim) majority of U.K. citizens voted to leave the European Union (EU).

This cannot be explained as simply being a fervent nationalistic reaction to immigration by those of a younger generation. To explain you first need to understand the difference between immigrants and economic migrants – all members of the EU are free to travel unrestricted within member states and to seek work without requiring either work permits or visas. Persons living in the poorer eastern (former Soviet) states of Poland, Bulgaria, Romania, Croatia, Czech Republic, Estonia, Hungary, Slovakia, Slovenia and soon to be Albania) naturally want to migrate (west) towards the more affluent countries of Germany, France, Belgium, Holland and the U.K. The advantage of moving to the U.K. over any other country however, is their ability to speak the native tongue (for most Europeans English being their second language) that of course is a huge advantage when moving to another country to seek employment.

The result has been a steady flow of uncontrolled economic migrants into the U.K. over the past 20 years. The population of the U.K. is roughly 66 million people in a country which is only four times the size of Vancouver Island. The infrastructure of the country is already at breaking point – i.e., schools, housing, hospitals, policing, prisons, social services, the road network, the rail network and even the electricity network. Further levels of migration can only be sustained if there is a controlled and measured basis on which people are allowed to enter the U.K. (as is the case today in Canada).

This of course cannot happen as the EU will not allow a fundamental change to the notion of open borders between member states.

The real issue for many living in the U.K. today is not a lack of migration control per se, but a rapidly deteriorating infrastructure (and hence standard of living) which cannot be alleviated by placing even more demands on it year on year by an ever increasing influx of people.

Further reason for voting "out" was the frustration vented towards a European parliament that has no transparency, accountability or control and a mechanism whereby U.K. taxpayers pay more into a central fund than we receive from it in return (similarities here with Alberta and its own payments to support federal spending plans).

When the U.K. joined what was the EEC in the late '60s, the purpose behind this was to open up free trade with no import quotas or tariffs on goods sold between member countries. What we have today however is a faceless political behemoth of an organization that has lost sight of its original reason for being.

For example, EU shape standardization regulations introduced for the sale of apples, citrus fruit, kiwi fruit, lettuces, peaches, pears, strawberries, sweet peppers, table grapes, tomatoes and bananas, and further marketing standards for 26 types of produce, had to be scrapped following reports that a fifth of produce had been rejected by shops across the EU for failing to meet the requirements. Good edible produce wasted because of appearance controls introduced by the EU.

In comparison, ask yourself whether or not Canadians would like federal decisions made in a Canadian parliament in Ottawa by represented and elected Canadian officials to then have those decisions ratified by a number of non-Canadian member states (say for example the USA, Mexico, Brazil, Chile, Venezuela and Argentina) before being able to put them into law and practice. I predict that over a period of time the same levels of frustration, bewilderment, concern and rejection would be experienced here as in the U.K.

In summary, was this the right choice? Economically, no. This will leave the U.K. very isolated and devoid of any trade deals with the rest of Europe. Politically, yes. U.K. citizens need to be able to stand up and determine their own laws free from foreign political interference and regulatory controls – and if they want to sell crooked or straight bananas then let that decision be made unhindered.

Plants help heal the body: herbalist

BY DOUG COLLIE
MVP Staff

Healing yourself is a question of bringing your body into balance and local plants can be part of that process, according to herbalist Danielle Pyper.

On July 21, Pyper, of Red Deer, instructed a class at Olds College called Heal Thyself - Learning YOUR Constitution. It was one of many classes offered during Hort Week which ran from July 18-22.

Herbal medicine is an alternative form of medicine. Patients should consult their physician before making any changes to their medication.

Pyper said the key in her form of medicine is to assess your body.

"What it is. Is it hot? Is it cold? Is it dry? Is it moist? What kind of digestive, skin, body issues is it prone to," she asked.

Pyper said plants also exhibit those same "energetics" - moistening, cooling or drying.

"I gave them some tools of how to observe their bodies - their skin, their bowel movements, their tongue, their eyes, their pulse; ways of assessing what their constitution is.

"Then talked about some plants. I gave them lists of different energetics within those plants and then how to match the right plant to the right person," she said.

As part of the class, Pyper examined Sharon Richardson of Calgary.

She looked at Richardson's eyes and her tongue and took her pulse. She needs to do all of those things to get an accurate picture of what's going on.

"Her tongue indicated that she had a lot of heat in her body. It had a red tip; it had a lot of red dots on it," Pyper said.

"But then her pulse was very deep, which generally means whatever issue a person has is chronic. It's very deep-seated, they've had it for a long period of time.

"Her pulse told me, 'no,' she actually needs a little bit of a push. She needs some heat. She needs a bitter stimulant or something to get her blood flowing, to get her energy up, to get her digestion moving.

"In her eyes primarily I saw a digestive issue. I saw a ring that encompassed - it's somewhat like a flower - that encompassed her stomach and her colon. Just around the pupil.

"So then I asked her and she said 'yes,' she has IBS (irritable bowel syndrome).

"I asked her how long she's had it. She's had it for a really long time. That's why her pulse is so low."

Pyper gave Richardson some slippery elm bark powder to deal with the stomach issues. She said people mix it into a gruel - whatever consistency works for them.

"I wouldn't use this for everybody who just had a little stomach ache here and there.

But people with chronic, long-term issues in their stomach, this is what I recommend," she said.

"Most people, if you help their bodies to rest and digest, they'll begin to heal some of their ailments on their own. So herbal medicine is about treating the individual, not the symptoms.

"It's about seeing the whole person and bringing the whole body into balance. Eventually all of the extra things, like your insulin issues and your blood pressure, some of those things will just disappear."

Hay City Slam looking unlikely

BY JOSEPH HO
MVP Staff

It appears that the annual Hay City Slam will not take place in Olds this year.

This summer would have been the fifth time the skate and BMX competition was held in Centennial Park, normally the last weekend of July.

Karen Strocher and her son Shea have been the leaders of more than 30 volunteers who have stepped up to put on the event each time, drawing competitors from across the province, and outside of it.

But Strocher said she's gone through a "tumultuous" year and hasn't been able to do the organizing.

"There's been a lot of family things going on with me right now. That was the least of my worries," Strocher said.

She adds that the Slam has always been a community effort, where local businesses would offer prizes and in-kind support; all of it to benefit youth and encourage volunteerism. As well, registration fees were donated to a charitable cause.

The Town of Olds would also provide assistance, assigning a community facilitator to guide organizers through the event hosting process, said chief operating officer Doug Wagstaff.

He adds that they haven't heard of anybody coming forward to keep the Slam going.

That worries Strocher.

"Once you lose the momentum of something like that, it's really hard to get going again. That's my feeling," she said. "One of our prime objectives was to make people aware of the sport and just create a fun event. We never made a lot of money. It wasn't about the money at all. It was about involving youth, involving community."

The Stochers used to run 360 Snow & Skate in Uptown Olds before closing shop last year.

Strocher said the store was vital to the event because it was a way to build relationships with the skate and BMX industry, suppliers and other businesses that helped out.

"I think without the store, there definitely was a void or a piece missing as far as community connection," she said.

Poor weather cuts car show entries

BY DOUG COLLIE
MVP Staff

Attendance and entries were down at the annual Oldsmobile Car Show, but the enthusiasm was strong organizers say.

The show, held July 16, took place at Hildebrand Motors and was organized by Oldsmobile Northern Lights chapter.

Forty-seven vehicles were registered to attend, from as far as Watrous, Sask. and North Saanich, B.C.

Hildebrand Motors sales manager Keith Klinck says the number of vehicles on display was down a third to a half from previous years.

It's believed about 300 people attended the show.

Klinck says poor weather was the big culprit.

"It was raining. It was pouring rain and people don't like to bring their fancy cars out in rainstorms," he says. "Hail is always a big concern too for people with classic cars. They don't want to be out and about in that."

The mayor's choice went to a 1960 Olds 98 shown by Kathy and Clarence Mineault of Dawson Creek.

Organizers say this year, several exhibits were cars that had not been in the show before.

Seven hurt in Westward Ho crash

BY DAN SINGLETON
MVP Staff

Seven people were injured, including at least one critically, in a two-vehicle crash at Westward Ho on July 24.

An SUV with five occupants was westbound on Highway 27 when a car pulled out of the Little Red Deer River Store turnout into the path of the SUV, say police.

The driver of the SUV was critically injured and was flown from the scene by STARS to a hospital in Calgary.

Six other people with undisclosed injuries were taken by ground ambulance to area hospitals.

Both the SUV and the car ended up in the eastbound lane of the highway just east of the Little Red Deer River Bridge. Debris from the crash covered both lanes of the two-lane highway.

Traffic was diverted south to the Bergen Road for several hours following the crash. The police investigation was continuing at press time Monday.

Helicopter occupants emerge from hard landing unhurt

BY SIMON DUCATEL
MVP Staff

All's well that ends well following what could have been a deadly emergency on July 24 when a helicopter with three people aboard made a hard landing in a remote wooded area west of Sundre.

"The three occupants were all recovered," said fire Chief Marty

Butts during a Monday morning phone interview with the Sundre Round Up.

They all seemed to be in pretty good shape when they jumped out of the helicopter that recovered them, he said.

Several members of the local fire department had mobilized to assist in the search and rescue operation following the report of the helicopter coming down at about 11:30 a.m.

"We had a good sized crew out there," said Butts.

However, the helicopter came down near Ice Lake — which is roughly located between Sundre and Lake Louise — in a remote wooded area that is only accessible by horseback or helicopter.

Concerns raised over drone use in local area

BY KRISTINE JEAN
MVP Staff

There are growing safety concerns over drone use across Canada and here in Mountain View County.

An incident that occurred on the night of June 30 during the Canada Day fireworks has some Innisfail residents talking. A drone was seen flying overhead in close proximity to the fireworks and the crowd below.

And last month, Transport Canada launched a national safety campaign to promote safe drone use and to inform Canadians about the federal government's plan to propose new regulations for drones within the next few months.

"As a responsible drone user, think twice about where you fly. Stay away from airports and aircraft, and know that there are serious consequences to unsafe use," said Marc Garneau, federal minister of transport on June 13.

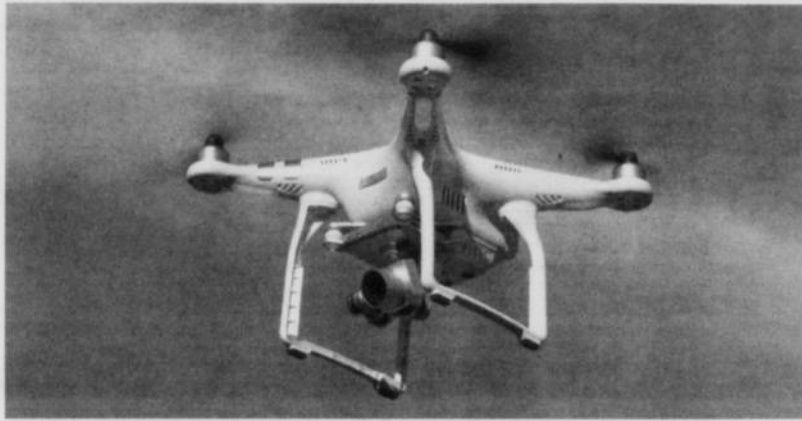

A video of the Innisfail fireworks was filmed by the drone that night and was posted to Facebook.

Innisfail mayor Brian Spiller was one of several people who witnessed the drone. He supports their use but noted safety and common sense should always be a top priority.

"The safety of our citizens should come first, not the entertainment of our citizens," said Spiller. "I think as long as people use drones safely and respect each other's privacy there's a good use for them."

Also referred to as an unmanned air vehicle (UAV), drones have been regulated for use by Transport Canada since 1996. The federal government is now taking steps to increase awareness about drone use and help educate the public and drone operators.

In the national safety campaign launch on June 13, Garneau also unveiled a "No Drone Zone" sign to remind operators to only use drones in approved areas. These signs will be distributed to airports and organizations to help publicize safe drone use.

Drones like this one have been seen flying in Mountain View County recently. Concerns are now being raised over whether drone owners are following government regulations. The federal government launched a national drone safety campaign, including #NoDroneZone (hashtag) in June.

In addition, Transport Canada is recommending that airports, parks, municipalities and event organizers post No Drone Zone signs around perimeters or areas when and where it is unsafe or illegal to fly drones.

"The No Drone Zone signs are a reminder that not all places are appropriate to fly a drone. Always think safety first," said Garneau.

Spiller said places that sell drones should also provide updated information with regards to drone usage, regulations and laws.

"I don't think the town is going to set out rules on drone usage, because I don't think it's in our capability to license the sky or to tell people what they can do in the sky," said Spiller. "I think that's up to Transport Canada or some higher authority."

Those using UAVs for commercial or research purposes do require a special flight operations certificate (SFOC). Recreational users do not require a certificate to fly unless their drone weighs more than 35 kilograms.

However, they are expected to follow Transport Canada's safety guidelines. They include staying at least nine kilometres from any airport, aerodrome or heliport, flying only during the day in good weather, and not flying in populated areas or near large groups of people, such as sporting events, concerts, festivals and fireworks shows.

Natasha Gauthier, spokesperson with Transport Canada, said that all operators must respect the Canadian aviation regulations, including rules and requirements related to controlled airspace.

"Using an unmanned air vehicle in a reckless and negligent manner could cause property damage or bodily harm, resulting in lawsuits, fines and jail time," she said, noting incidents of unsafe drone use can be reported and investigated. Gauthier was made aware of the Innisfail incident but added it has not yet been formally reported to her department.

"If an incident is reported to the department one of our inspectors will verify if the rules were followed, if the (SFOC) conditions were respected and if the drone was operated safely," added Gauthier. "If we find operators aren't aware of the rules, we will educate them about the risks and their responsibilities and take appropriate enforcement action, which can include issuing fines. Local police may also be involved if other laws were broken."
